Dear Andrea,

On behalf of Living Cities, Main Street America, and the Truist Foundation we are excited to share that we have selected Nashville to join the Where It Starts: Breaking Barriers to Business cohort, focused on strengthening the relationship between local government business serving agencies and commercial corridor business support organizations to foster an equitable entrepreneurial ecosystem for business owners of color in Southeast U.S. cities. Our team was impressed by your application, and we think your goals would bring a unique perspective to your fellow cohort cities of Atlanta, Charlotte, Memphis, and Miami.

In partnership with three business serving organizations representing commercial corridors of color in your city, you will participate in a 36-month initiative, concluding on June 30, 2026, that will work with your team in developing a work plan that addresses systemic barriers preventing business owners of color from starting, preserving, or growing and culminating in the creation of jobs. We will provide a catalytic grant of $100,000 to begin implementing your work plan once complete.

Throughout the cohort, we will support your five-member team, two from your business serving agency and three from respective business serving organizations with the following core activities:

- Site Visits: On-site interaction to bridge value add with underpinning realities.
- Technical Assistance: Coaching to identify and reform systemic barriers.
- Evaluation: Performance measures grounded in anti-racist analysis.
- Communication: National platforms to tell stories about your work.
- Financial: Paid workshops, conferences, and an implementation grant.

In recognition of all your work to become part of this cohort, congratulations. We look forward to working with you to improve your entrepreneurial ecosystem for business owners of color in your city.

Sincerely,

Norris Williams

Assistant Director, Business Ownership
